Excerpt: . weak, I doubt if I could get there. -- We will carry you, the girls said. The oldest one carried him first. She lifted him on her back. Coyote then told her to raise up her dress and let him slide down lower on her back. With that she felt him touch her, and dropped him. To the others she said, I did not mean to drop her. The next one tried to carry him, and the same thing happened; and so with all four of them. Then they told the youngest that she must do her share. She refused, however, so the oldest tried again. When they reached the hill and could see the houses, Coyote said, I can walk from here on. When they arrived at the place, they heard a loud noise and saw the people dancing. There was another Coyote at the camp. This one, when he caught sight of them, called out, The old woman is coming to dance with us! The disguised Coyote began to dance and sing, and forgot all about his lameness. Where are Coyote s eyes? Let me have them! he said. Let her have them! some one said. The people crowded together and made room for her to dance. As soon as he had his eyes, he took out the other ones and put back his own. Then he took off his disguise and ran away. The people wondered at first. Then they...
